Talking to Your Child About Drugs

Just as you inoculate your children against illnesses like measles, you can help "immunize" your children against drug use by giving them the facts before they are presented with the substance. When kids don't feel comfortable talking to parents, they're likely to seek answers to their questions elsewhere, even if their sources are not reliable.

If kids are not properly informed, there's a greater risk that they're going to engage in risky behaviors and experiment with drugs. So, what can you say to your child?

Preschool to Age 7

Before you get anxious about talking to your young children, take heart. You've probably already laid the groundwork for a discussion. For instance, when you give a fever medication or an antibiotic to your child, you have the opportunity to discuss the benefits and the appropriate use of those drugs. You are providing a context of how to use drugs in a responsible way. This is also a time when your child is likely to be very attentive to your behavior and any guidance that you provide.

This is also an ideal time to start taking advantage of "teachable moments." If you see a character on a billboard or on TV that is smoking, talk to your child about cigarettes, nicotine addiction, and what smoking does to a person's body. This can lead into a discussion about other drugs and how they can potentially cause harm.

The tone of these discussions should be calm and it's a good idea to present the concept in terms that you know your child can understand. Be specific about the effects of the drugs: how they make a person feel, the risk of overdose, and the other long-term damage drugs can cause. To give your kids the facts, you might have to do a little research.

Ages 8 to 12

As your kids grow older, you can open up conversations about drugs with them by asking them what they think about drugs. If you ask the questions in a nonjudgmental, open-ended way, it is likely that you will get a more honest response from your child. This is also a time when kids are still really willing to talk openly to their parents about touchy subjects. By establishing a dialogue at this age, you will help keep the door open as kids get older and are naturally less inclined to share their thoughts and feelings so openly with you.

Even if your question doesn't immediately result in a discussion, you've gotten your kids thinking about the issue. If you show your kids that you're willing to discuss the topic openly and hear what they have to say, they might be more willing to come to you for help in the future.

News items, such as steroid use in professional sports, can be springboards for casual conversations about current events. These discussions can provide your children with information about the risks of drugs.

Ages 13 to 17

At this age, your kids are likely to know other kids who use or abuse alcohol or drugs. They are also likely to have friends and peers who drive. It's important to talk about the dangers of driving under the influence on your kids. Talk about the legal issues - jail time and fines for driving under the influence - and the possibility that they or someone else might be killed or seriously injured.

It's a good idea to set up a written or unwritten contract on the conditions of going out or using the car. You can promise to pick your kids up at any time (even 2:00 AM!) without asking questions if they call you when the person who drove has been drinking or using drugs.

The contract can also detail other situations: For example, if you find out someone has been drinking or using drugs in your car while your kids are driving, you may want to suspend driving privileges for 6 months. If you discuss all of this at the beginning, there will be no surprises and they will be clear about your expectations.

Laying Good Groundwork

No parent, child, or family is immune to the effects of drugs. Some of the best kids can end up in trouble, even when they have made an effort to avoid it, and even when they have been given the proper guidance from their parents.

However, certain groups of kids may be more likely to use drugs than others. Kids who have friends who use drugs are likely to try drugs themselves. Kids who may be feeling socially isolated for one reason or another may turn to drugs. So it's important to know your child's friends - and their parents. Be involved in your children's lives. If your child's school runs an anti-drug program, get involved. You might learn something! Pay attention to how your kids are feeling and let them know that you are available and willing to listen in a nonjudgmental way. Recognize when your kids are going through difficult times so that you can provide the support they need or seek additional care beyond what you can provide.

A warm, open family environment, where kids are encouraged to talk about their feelings, where their achievements are praised, and where their self-esteem is bolstered will encourage kids to come forward with their questions and concerns. When kids are censored in their own homes, they go elsewhere to find support and answers to their most important questions.

In Memory of Betty Bellanger

As many of you know we recently lost a dear friend and community hero Betty Bellanger. Betty went to be with her beloved husband Paul on March 23, 2006, As I sit here thinking of what to write, I can say this is not a good bye, but a "See You Later". I could spend hours writing about Betty.

We all knew how much Betty loathed graffiti, fought effortlessly against liquor licenses, rounded up neighbors and friends for community clean ups but most treasured by her was her love for the kids at Desert View Elementary School. She will be truly missed by so many.

What I will miss about Betty are the daily emails, her friendship and most of all my Monday morning telephone call with her first words "Hello Honey how was your weekend?" We may be on the phone for 3 minutes or 20 minutes, we may talk about nothing of importance or how we were going to solve the world's problems.

Betty was the only person I knew who could hold up a city council meeting. Everyone knew her and she had to make all the rounds, saying hello and giving out hugs to everyone. I remember attending a council meeting with her and the Mayor himself asking Betty, if it was ok to start the meeting?

Betty and her husband received endless awards, she beamed at each one, but she beamed even more when she received a hug from one of her kids. That was like winning the lottery for her.

I want to thank her family for sharing Betty with all of us. She made this world a better place. Many of us have promised Betty we will carry on taking care of her kids. We have big shoes to fill and will do our best to fill them.

See you later Betty! You will always be in our hearts and thoughts!

Washington Elementary School District Head Start Program

Washington Elementary School District Head Start Program is currently taking applications for the 2006-2007 school year. Head Start is funded by the US Department of Health and Human Services through the City of Phoenix Human Services Department. Within the Sunnyslope area there are three schools that offer Head Start services, these schools are: Sunnyslope, Mountain View and Desert View. In addition to the Sunnyslope area, Head Start is offered in 11 other schools throughout the district. These services are available to 4-year old children, with priority given to children that turn four by August 31, 2006, whose family resides within the district boundaries. Eligibility for Head Start is determined by family income and special circumstances. The program emphasizes diversity and an individualized approach to education that encourages children to make choices within a developmentally appropriate learning environment. In addition to Head Start, the state funded Building Bridges program and the tuition fee program are also offered through the district. For more information, please call (602) 347-2206.

Assistance League of Phoenix

The busiest days of the week are Wednesdays and Thursdays at Assistance League of Phoenix Philanthropic Center located at 9224 N. 5th Street. During the past 12 months, the organization's membership has strived to reach many goals, including providing 3,400 children in need with new school wardrobes plus shoes, creating 7000 HUGS teddy bears for traumatized children, creating 464 Assault Survivor Kits for Phoenix victims of rape and assault, and creating 460 layettes for newborns in need. In addition, they regularly visit Mountain View Elementary, providing tutoring, plus many enrichment activities and equipment.

Every year the desire to increasingly reach greater numbers in need creates challenges for the leagues' members. Recently, the joy of helping others has been shared by a significant number of Community Volunteers. No membership dues or meetings required -- just signing up for a task they enjoy. Students interested in acquiring community service hours are encouraged to contact Nelda Crowell for information. This is an opportunity for area businesses wishing to donate employees' services to successful projects. Please meet just some of our new Community Volunteer friends:

Memorial Day

Memorial Day, originally called Decoration Day, is a day to remember those who have died in our nation's service. After the Civil war many people in the North and South decorated graves of fallen soldiers with flowers.

In the Spring of 1866, Henry C. Welles, a druggist in the village of Waterloo, NY, suggested that the patriots who had died in the Civil War should be honored by decorating their graves. General John B. Murray, Seneca County Clerk, embraced the idea and a committee was formed to plan a day devoted to honoring the dead. Townspeople made wreaths, crosses and bouquets for each veteran's grave. The village was decorated with flags at half mast. On May 5 of that year, a processional was held to the town's cemeteries, led by veterans. The town observed this day of remembrance on May 5 of the following year as well.

Decoration Day was officially proclaimed on May 5, 1868 by General John Logan in his General Order No. 11, and was first observed officially on May 30, 1868. The South did not observe Decoration Day, preferring to honor their dead on separate days until after World War I. In 1882, the name was changed to Memorial Day, and soldiers who had died in other wars were also honored.

In 1971, Memorial Day was declared a national holiday to be held on the last Monday in May.

Today, Memorial Day marks the unofficial beginning of the summer season in the United States. It is still a time to remember those who have passed on, whether in war or otherwise. It also is a time for families to get together for picnics, ball games, and other early summer activities.
